THE BARNES REVIEW

A JOURNAL OF NATIONALIST THOUGHT & HISTORY

Volume XVI Number 3 May/June 2010 www.barnesreview.org

This period cartoon depicts Britain's Lloyd George — the supposedly redeemer of the Jews — bowing before Lionel Rothschild as his throne of moneybags leans and sags. In fact, this was the reality of the day; the effective fruition of the age-old Jewish dream of a New World Order – a Jewish Utopia – in which all other peoples of the planet would bow down and worship the Jewish people, the new rulers of the Earth. For good reason, indeed, Rothschild was known as the "king of kings."

WILL THE NANOMETRICAL REICH SUPREME?

Utopia...for Some

THERE IS EVIDENCE A — IT IS NO "THEORY" – that long-established and much-heralded Jewish religious teachings assert that the Jewish people will ultimately come to rule the world, that they are superior to all other people and that ultimately, all the "goyim" will bow down and worship them. Here we are the facts about this bizarre (and dangerous) philosophy as excerpted from Michael Collins Piper's book, The New Babylon. This will be uncomfortable reading for those who have been told that Hitler's Jews exposed to the type of philosophy outlined in ancient Jewish tradition.

CHAPTER TWO

The Jewish Utopia:
The New World Order

The New Babylon
by Michael Collins Piper

In 1922, Michael Higger, Ph.D., assembled a remarkable book entitled The Jewish Utopia which, in effect, was a blueprint for the creation of Jerusalem, which he described as (the) "symbol of the Jewish Utopia." Higger's volume is a remarkable document which the late Robert H. Williams, a former editor of The Barnes Review, in 1994 accurately described as a compendium of the philosophy behind what Williams called the "Christian World Order" – that is, the New World Order.

A Rabbi, clothed in Talmudical garb, instructs a Jewish boy in the Holy Talmud in the Jewish Separate Schools.

What is remarkable about Higger's book is that the copy that Robert H. Williams had was a personal copy of a prepublication-era American nationalist was found at the Abraham I. Schechter Collection of Hebraica and Judaica of the Jewish Theological Seminary of America in Kerlikah of Tovay-Rabbis. As Higger's book was no mere "think piece" by one isolated writer. The organization of rabbis in Kerlikah of Tovay-Rabbis was one that they deemed that says to the entire university library.

Higger's remarkable book was a compilation of Higger's study of what Williams described as "the sum total of the prophecies, teachings and plans and aspirations of Jewish religious leaders down through the ages." Higger's book was the culmination of his own life's work and the beginning of the Babylonian Talmud, in which could be found what Williams described as "the essence of Higger's own personal views of nationalist, millenarian interpretation of the Torah" (the book of canon, being the first five books of the Old Testament – the revealed "Five Books of Moses").

The books echoed of "the righteous" and "the non-righteous." In the end, according to Higger's interpretation of Jewish tradition, the "non-righteous" shall perish." Higger wrote:

> To understand the ultimate conception of an ideal world, it will help us if we imagine a land passing from hands to hand, from country to country, from the Sadrian Oceans to the North Pole, reaching "righteous" or "wicked" as the historical fact each one of the 16 hundred million inhabitants of our earthly globe.
> We should then be on the right road toward solving the major problems that burden so heavily the shoulders of thinkers. Such problems as nationalism, internationalism and unity – two distinct and unmistakable groups, namely, righteous and wicked. To the righteous would belong all that is good, noble, and praiseworthy, while to the wicked would belong nothing.
> In the future, the words of Isaiah, in the language of the Prophet, will be literally true: "The wicked shall be no more." It shall be banquet. Behold, My servants shall drink, but ye shall be thirsty. Behold, My servants shall rejoice, but ye shall be ashamed."
> This is the force of the prophecy of Habakkuk, when he said, "Hast shall ye again discern between the righteous and the wicked, between him that serveth God and him that serveth Him not."

This quaint cartoon with a double-edged meaning, appeared in the British-satirical journal Puck circa 1880s. A Jewish peddler carrying his wares of poetry, music, statesmanship, science, literature, patriotism – and promissory notes, is shown being welcomed to America by Columbia, the symbol of America. The caption reads: "Welcome, dark-eyed, swarthy Carbin exiles, who had hurried from Asia Minor, willing for pastile instruments." I have thrown on this sort of thing for 10 centuries: Go on, gentlemen, persecution helps de process [i.e. business]."

And it is clear, throughout Higger's writings (based on his analysis of the works of the great rabbis and Jewish spiritual leaders) that the "righteous" are the Jews and the "wicked" are the non-Jews (the goyim, the servants of the Jews and the "wicked" will be those who are persecuted by the Jews for the standing in opposition to their mission)!

Higger cites the words of the Talmud: "It is a doctrine by us [the Jews], not for them [that is, everyone else except] other human being on the face of the earth."

Higger goes on to point out that under this New World Order (what he calls "The Jewish Utopia"): "All the treasures and natural resources of the world would be concentrated in Jerusalem." Higger declares that "all the world will be in hearing, with the prophecy of Isaiah: 'In Your gate and her bars shall be holiness to the Lord; it shall be not treasured nor laid out, for her merchandise shall be holiness to the Lord; it shall be not treasured nor laid out, for her merchandise shall be holiness to the Lord; it shall not be
